Woodbine—Mayor William Pikolycky is pleased to announce that local resident Bernard Sypniewski will be speaking on robotics at the Cape May County Library's Main Branch in Cape May Court House on June 9 from 7 to 8 p.m.

Sypniewski teaches Computer Science at Rowan University's Camden Campus. He is also widely published in the field of linguistics. A Woodbine resident since 1973, Sypniewski serves as Woodbine Public Defender and Webmaster.

"Robots are among us in all shapes and sizes. They are not as scary, sinister or intelligent as you think. The talk will be about small robots, their construction and programming. Anybody can do it, even you," encourages Sypniewski.

Start Time: 7:00 PM

End Time: 8:00 PM

Description:

The Cape May County Library will host Bernard Sypniewski, at the Main Branch Library 30 E. Mechanic Street CMCH, as he lectures on robotics.

Robots are among us in all shapes and sizes. They are not as scary, sinister or intelligent as you think. The talk will be about small robots, their construction and programming. Anybody can do it, even you.

Bernard Sypniewski is an assistant professor in Rowan University's computer science department and is assigned to the Camden campus. Ever since he saw an episode of Captain Video as a little child, he has been fascinated with robots. Since the price on components has come down, now he can play with them. He also works with Artificial Intelligence and linguistics.
